

Checklist for larger local Nightlights campaign organizers

Organizing a campaign in your city involves above all a lot of communication. In order to ensure your success, we've developed the following checklist for local campaign organizers.

Before you start planning a local campaign, you should think carefully about whether a local campaign with many participants, a kick-off event, and group communication, is right for you. Alternatively, you can participate individually (see website).

✓ You're sure you want to run a big campaign? Then here's your checklist:

First step – as soon as possible!

Have you...

- o not only interest, but also at least 1-2 hours per week to organize the campaign?
- already spoken with the RUB about your campaign organization plans?
- o selected an area of focus to count streets in?
- o checked that such a campaign is legal in your country?

Note that all data will be saved on servers located inside of the European Union.

✓ You're ready to start planning your campaign!

Plan the campaign – from now until end of August 2023

Have you...

- o looked for other campaign planning team members (if you don't want to organize it on your own)?
- o defined your goal (e.g. number of surveys) and established a timeline?
- o arranged a date and time for a kick-off event (end of August or start of September), and confirmed it with the RUB?
- agreed with the RUB on dates and times for check-in meetings (every 2-4 weeks for 15-30 minutes)?
- o chosen a system for informing local participants about the action (e.g. a Mailchimp list, Slack, blog, or WhatsApp group)?
- o talked with RUB about campaign flyers for the participants to carry, and arranged a way for participants to pick it up from you?
- checked that any pre-defined transects for your city are correctly displayed in the app?

✓ The team from RUB can support you with the following materials:

- o A flyer that can be shared before and during the campaign.
- A webinar about the scientific background of the project.
- An online training (tutorial), that explains how to classify light sources and use the app.
- Example materials for preparing a local press release.
- Reflective safety vests for participants (for campaigns inside the EU customs area).
- Virtually joining your kickoff event.

Finding participants – from now until end of August

Have you...

- o shared the information material with interested locals?
- informed your city officials about your plans?
- o contacted local organizations that can support your campaign (e.g. conservation organizations, observatories or planetariums, schools, museums)?
- o contacted friends, colleagues, and other multipliers in the measurement area and invited them to take part or help find additional participants?
- o set up a mailing list or other channel in order to contact participants?
- contacted the editors of local newspapers, radio, or individual journalists, and provided a copy of your press release?
- (optional) contacted local organizations that provide event calendars, and asked them to put your event on it?
- o invited all interested volunteers to the kick-off event?
- shared the link to the online tutorial with your participants, and informed the participants that they cannot take part until they have completed it?
- o informed the local police (or related local authorities) that during September and October people will be on the streets in teams using an app to count light sources?
- ✓ The app protects personal privacy according to European regulations. Participants should always count lights over transects that contain either no or else at least four households.

Running the campaign – September and October

During the measurement campaign, be ready to...

- o distribute the flyers and (if applicable) safety vests.
- o regularly check the status of your campaign (how close you are to achieving your goal).
- o maintain contact with your volunteers, answer questions, provide updates, celebrate milestones, and (if necessary) look for additional participants.
- Recommended: arrange an event at the end of campaign, in order to celebrate its success with your volunteers.
- o Optional: inform local media about the progress of your campaign.
- ✓ If your campaign goes as planned, then by the end of October you will have achieved your goal, and it will be time to celebrate!
- ✓ In case you notice in mid-October that you are far from reaching your goal, then make a plan together with the RUB team about how to go forward. Together, we will develop a sensible plan for revising your goal. The project should not be a source of stress, but rather be enjoyable and inspiring!
